The Honorable Gavin Newsom
Governor
State of California
State Capitol
Sacramento, CA 94814

Dear Governor Newsom:

The City of Glendora acknowledges the leadership and foresight at the state and county levels, issuing the first in the nation Safer-at-Home and social distancing orders. These early mandates eliminated the surge of cases and overwhelming of our medical system that we planned for, but never experienced. We thank you and your administration for saving countless lives through these proactive measures.

The COVID-19 pandemic has caused life for many to come to a complete standstill. With all levels of government issuing declaration of emergencies and numerous executive/health orders, competing news reports on the severity of COVID-19 and scope of the issue, as well as constant politicking through daily press conferences, it's easy to understand the confusion that exists with the COVID-19 health emergency.

Along with the confusion, comes the profound economic impacts that have hit the United States. Everyone understands that the COVID-19 emergency is causing the various levels of government to ask the public to make unimaginable sacrifices. Not even during the Great Depression, has a singular event brought community life to a quasi-standstill. Over the next week unemployment rates could approach 20% and it's universally understood that hundreds of thousands of small business will never reopen. During the age of commercial flying, in no other time since the week after 9/11, have fewer planes flown over the United States. The freeways in Los Angeles are empty, professional sports have stopped and the education system is now completely digital, which eliminates school for large populations that cannot afford access to the requisite technology.

The extraordinary efforts our residents, local hospitals and essential businesses have taken to maintain social distancing to flatten the curve, have allowed us to meet this moment and prepare for a worst-case scenario. We have been successful with in our efforts to manage the virus's spread and made investments to prepare for reoccurrences in the future.

Collectively, the State and County of Los Angeles have asked a great deal of Glendora's residents in the past six weeks and they have risen to every challenge. Small businesses have been asked to risk permanent closure, layoff beloved employees, and most have not received the financial support promised to them by all levels of government. Residents continue to face significant public health challenges by sheltering in place, which will only be exacerbated with a prolonged recession and high levels of unemployment. Further, despite the heroic efforts of our educators, caretakers, and students, we continue to place unrealistic expectations on education.

We have asked our residents to take these desperate measures because of the unique risks posed to the broader community so we can flatten the curve and allow our healthcare system capacity to not be overwhelmed.

Now is the time to move forward with the economic recovery. We applaud the efforts by the State in the development of the Western States Pact, California's Roadmap to Modify the Stay and Home Order, and California Resilience Roadmap.

When discussing existing requests for local agencies to open the economy on April 20th, you answered with:

Localism. We recognize 48 counties, 480 cities, different parts of the State are impacted differently. But the fact we are one state and the impact we collectively have on one another in neighboring counties, neighboring cities must also be considered...All of that is exactly why last week we put out those terms, those six areas of categories where we are advancing those conversations at the local level, incorporating their thoughts and advice at the state level....

Further, on April 20th, you indicated that the State would be expecting additional requests in the weeks to come. Specifically, you stated:

We have a process to adjudicate those and begin to dialogue with our team and their local health team to make sure it's a health-based decision, not any other type of decision-making....Health first, science and data, everything else follows from that.

The City of Glendora agrees with your assessment that localism is paramount and an accurate, fact-based system, is needed to look at the collective COVID-19 issue moving forward.

As a medium sized city in the Eastern San Gabriel Valley region of Los Angeles County, Glendora's localism efforts will look much different than those of Downtown Los Angeles. Our economy, population density and access to healthcare are drastically different – so too, should be our ability to re-open our economy. The City of Glendora has a great relationship with the County of Los Angeles and will work with them through their newly created Safely Reopening Los Angeles County initiative.

In order to promote localism, the City of Glendora requests:

1. A specific date when California Resilience Roadmap's, Phase 2, Lower Risk Workplaces, will begin in conjunction with local health departments.
2. Granting specific allowances for cities to move through the California Resilience Roadmap phases ahead of other cities within a county, should they be able to meet specific, fact-based criteria.
3. The continued push to provide comprehensive, free COVID -19 testing for everyone.

4. Clear and concise information on COVID-19, including geographically accurate counts of current cases (net, not total), current hospitalization rates, and accurate infection and death rates (e.g. USC and County of Los Angeles Study).
5. Advocating of additional funding for cities under a population of 500,000, to address the impacts of COVID-19, including funds received through the CARES Act.

The League of California Cities projects general fund revenue loss associated with the COVID-19 pandemic of approximately $7 billion over the next two fiscal years for cities in California. It is estimated that 90% of cities will be forced to reduce staff or cut services to the public, further exacerbating our unemployment issues and limiting assistance when our communities need us the most. Moreover, this loss of revenue represents the devastating economic impacts to businesses that generate these dollars. When these issues are compounded by losses in revenue to the counties and State, the economic impacts are catastrophic.

The Glendora community understands the necessity of the sacrifices made to date, and has willingly complied with all executive and health orders to protect the broader community. Further, the City understands and appreciates that "normal" will not happen quickly and that there may be a need for targeted actions based on data driven decisions (e.g. congregate living facilities.) While we have been patient and understanding, the City cannot support additional universal restrictions or an extension of the status quo of the Safer at Home orders past May 15th – we must move forward.

We would appreciate your consideration of our requests to provide a specific start date for the State's economic recovery and granting additional powers to cities under a more specific order, that allows for a localized path forward for cities that reside in large and varied counties, such as Los Angeles.

Localism is powerful – help us meet our moment.

Sincerely,

Michael Allawos
